Register a Component AFRAME.registerComponent (name, definition) Register an A-Frame component. We must register components before we use them anywhere in <a-scene>. Meaning from an HTML file, components should come in order before <a-scene>. {string} name - Component name. The component's public API as represented through an HTML ...

Black-box vs. White-box Frameworks. Component-framework systems come in two basic "flavors": white-box and black-box. The two types differ in how the framework relates to the components. In a white-box framework, the components have an inheritance relationship with the framework, i.e. are subclasses of the framework.

Black picture frames have surged in popularity for a good reason: They look great no matter where you place them, and they showcase art and photography spectacularly! Plus, you can find them all over, making it easier than ever to get exactly what you want. That said, it's important to note that not all black frames are created equal!

Traditional panels use white backsheets and silver frames, while all-black modules use -- you guessed it -- black backsheets and black frames. They're manufactured the same way through the same processes, except black adhesives may be used around junction boxes and other electronics on all-black modules.

With frames, as with all the art work components it's important not to distract from the art itself. The frames are meant to complement and enhance, so simple black or walnut wooden frame is great for most art. In galleries and art shows a white single or double picture mat with a basic wooden frame is more than sufficient.
